EU DEFORESTATION REGULATION (EUDR)

Regulatory Support &
Supplychain Traceability

December 30, 2026:
Companies failing to meet the EUDR's stringent due diligence requirements may face severe financial penalties, loss of market access, and reputational damage, significantly impacting their global operations.

EUDR Compliance

Deforestation has reached alarming levels, with the Food and Agriculture Organization (FAO) estimating that 420 million hectares of forest, or roughly 10% of the world's total, were lost between 1990 and 2020. In response, the European Union has introduced a new regulation, effective from December 30, 2025, requiring companies to ensure that certain commodities sold on the EU market—such as wood, rubber, cocoa, coffee, cattle, soy, and palm oil—are deforestation-free. Failure to comply could result in fines of up to 4% of a company's EU turnover and exclusion from the market.

With increasing pressure from both regulatory bodies and consumers, the demand for deforestation-free products is growing rapidly. Brands, traders, and operators who import or export these commodities are now seeking solutions to meet these requirements and maintain their market access.
